

Write XHTML and a CSS page to duplicate the figure shown above. Replace my name with yours and link to this page from your class page.

You should have the CSS as a separate file. Red should be the body color. You should have a generic or default rule “.default” that is not tied to any specific tag that sets the color to black. You should use specific rules for tags to set the other colors.

Your page should be accessible from the web. Pursuant to the Honor Code, the code should be your work and, as such, should be pledged.